STEERING COMMITTEE

This committee should be appointed at least four (4) years in advance. Because members are from various states, it is helpful to meet at the PR Convention four (4) years in advance.

1. Committee members may consist of:
 - a. Sitting president of the state to hold the convention
 - b. Person most likely to be your state president during the convention
 - c. Sitting PR Director
 - d. Person most likely to be the PR Director during the convention.
2. Appointments
 - a. Appoint a convention chairman
 - b. Consult with the chairman to see if s/he wants to have a vice chairman.
3. The committee dissolves when the chairman and vice chairman are appointed. Chairman and vice chairman are approved by PR Board of Directors two years prior to the convention.

CONVENTION CHAIRMAN

LOCATION, DATES AND HOTEL SELECTION

1. Compare facilities and prices of more than one hotel. Set up appointments with potential hotels soon after the state knows it will be hosting the convention, preferably four (4) years ahead.
2. The location, date and hotel selection shall be made with the approval of the PR Director who will be in office during the convention. The director may prefer dates to include a Saturday night so that members coming by air may get the best possible air travel rates. Some hotels offer better room rates for weekend meetings.
3. Request the history of the previous eight (8) conventions on attendance, number of meals served, sleeping rooms rented, etc. from PR Convention Coordinator. This will provide guidance on convention needs. Select a hotel that will accommodate these needs.

4. Food prices are usually not set until approximately six (6) months before the convention, but ask for a list of breakfasts, lunches and dinners with current prices and the maximum percentage of increase per year.
5. In an odd-numbered year the convention must be held prior to the NGC Convention.

HOTEL CONTRACT

1. Obtain a proposed contract from the hotel. Every detail should be in writing with costs involved. See "Negotiating the Contract" following.
2. Ask hotel to provide copies of the proposed contract to the convention chairman (you), the sitting director and the PR Convention Coordinator for review.
3. The convention chairman is responsible for seeing the contract through to its final version. Revisions are often necessary.
4. The sitting PR Director is responsible for signing the final contract even though a different person may be director during the convention being planned.

NEGOTIATING THE CONTRACT

The convention chairman is responsible for negotiating the contract with the hotel. It is one of the most important jobs of a convention. You will be negotiating with a sales manager from the hotel. These persons frequently change jobs and you could be dealing with several different ones prior to your convention. The signed contract is your protection and assurance that you will get that for which you negotiate. Do not count on verbal agreements or assumptions - you will get only items as specified in the contract. For example, if you discuss a complimentary workroom with the sales manager but it does not appear in the contract you may end up paying for that room. You are the buyer and the hotel needs and wants your business. Drive a hard bargain! Know what you need and get as much as possible FREE and IN THE CONTRACT. Some adjustments may be made later - but don't count on it! NEGOTIATE. Remember, if you do not ask the hotel will not volunteer information.

1. The name on the contract must be "Pacific Region of National Garden Clubs, Inc."
2. During the convention, only the convention chairman can make changes such as ordering tables, committee meeting rooms, microphones, etc. This must be stated in the contract.
3. Parking. Negotiate for free parking.
4. Sleeping rooms. Negotiate for lowest possible room rate. Make sure it is cheaper than rates available online, AAA, AARP, etc.
5. Complimentary sleeping rooms. Room credits based on the number of sleeping rooms rented determine the number of complimentary rooms. One room (one night) credit for each 50 rooms occupied is customary. A suite may require two credits.
6. The hotel will usually offer one complimentary room or suite. Try to negotiate for an additional complimentary room or suite.

Priority for complimentary rooms

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|--|
| 1. PR Director and/or NGC President | If not complimentary, paid from convention acct. |
| 2. Convention chairman | If not complimentary, paid from convention acct. |

7. Meeting rooms (See "Scheduling the Meeting Rooms" page 5.)
 - a. Ask for a layout of the hotel showing all meeting and banquet rooms with capacity figures. This will help in planning function space.
 - b. Negotiate for all meeting rooms free of charge. Hotels provide free meeting and function rooms based on the number of sleeping rooms rented and meals/beverage cost.
 - c. The hotel may charge a set-up fee. If so, negotiate for a one time set-up fee.
8. Special rooms (reception, exhibits, workshops, workroom etc.) and properties
 - a. Consider needs for workshops or activity requested by the person who will be the PR Director at time of convention
 - b. Arrange for a flag for opening ceremony.
 - c. Have water with glasses provided for all meetings.
 - d. Arrange for a second microphone with floor lectern and light for reports during business meetings. A mixer is required if more than one microphone is used and there may be an additional cost.
 - e. Coordinate with audio/visual and program chairmen.
 - Assure there is adequate lighting for design programs. If not, have lights brought in.
 - Arrange for audio or visual equipment if needed for programs.
9. Head table
 - a. Arrange for a skirted raised head table for approximately eight (8) for each business meeting and 10 for each meal. Consult with PR Director on the numbers.
 - b. If the same room is to be used (although not advisable) for business meetings and meals, the head table should stay in place throughout convention.
 - c. A lectern with microphone and light should be on the head table for all meals and meetings.
 - d. If a program requires exhibit space, have the program set up at the side or other end of the room away from the head table to avoid moving people seated at the head table.
10. Master account

Specify that the master account shall be paid by PR check (not personal funds and not a personal credit card). Specify who will pay the hotel bill – chairman or treasurer.
11. Menus and meal prices
 - a. The catering manager may suggest that you meet approximately 3 - 6 months before the event to select menus because of possible price changes. Do not let the hotel confine you to a prescribed menu. Catering can help you in selecting food and maintaining a reasonable cost. Get every meal detailed - even the salad dressings! Do it early to get prices locked in and to have entree choices (if any) available for registration form.
 - b. At this meeting establish how hotel bills will be paid, exact cost of each meal and who will sign the bill following each meal. The convention chairman is usually the one to sign the bill after each meal. This should be confirmed, in writing, in advance of the convention.
 - c. Select menus and add gratuity and tax. For the registration form, adjust prices to an even figure. Registration fees are used for expenses, not overage on meal prices.
 - d. Buffets are time consuming, sometimes short on food, frequently more costly and are not recommended.

12. Other

- a. Ask the hotel about their display signs outside and inside of the hotel.
- b. Place posters and welcome signs in strategic places, such as lobby, entrance to the exhibit room, etc.
- c. Decide if floral designs are to be displayed in public areas.
- d. Include airport transportation schedules in the CALL. Ask the hotel for recommendations. Include a small map and directions indicating access from highways to the hotel.
- e. Request hotel brochures to distribute at the convention one year prior.
- f. Advise the hotel and the coffee shop manager of the time and approximate number if there are "meals on your own" so that adequate space and service is available.

WORKING WITH THE PERSON WHO IS TO BE PR DIRECTOR DURING THE CONVENTION

The convention chairman must work closely with the director from the beginning, consulting with the director for input and approval on important issues including:
